

The Mountains Foundation offers five different environmental education programs, which are listed below:

WINTER SNOWSHOE HIKE

While exploring our local mountains on snowshoes, students will learn how plants, humans, and animals adapt to the winter environment. Through demonstrations, observation, and independent discovery, students will learn about the water cycle, snowpack, local watershed, and human impacts on these systems.

Grades: 5th -12th

Length: 2- 3 Hours

Students: 30 Maximum additional $50 per class

INVESTIGATING ECOSYSTEMS

Students engage in observation, activities, and discussion about local wildlife, food chains, habitat components, and adaptations. Through activities, students gain an appreciation for the complexity and diversity of the natural environment. Students will gain a greater understanding of environmental stewardship and the importance of preserving and protecting public lands.

Grades: 3rd-12th

Length: 1 - 3 hours

Students: 60 Maximum

JUNIOR FOREST RANGER

Students journey through a series of three activities where they will have hands-on opportunities to learn skills that will excite them about their local mountains, while completing their ranger workbook. Students will learn basic principles of fire ecology, the different parts of a compass, complete an orienteering course, and explore the natural world to improve their observation skills. This program provides continued learning through workbook activities that motivate children to explore and embrace their responsibility to the natural world.

Grades: 3rd - 6th

Length: 3 hours

Students: 60 Maximum

ON THE RIGHT TRAIL

Lessons revolve around activities with which students may be familiar: hiking, horseback riding, off-highway vehicle use, and more. This curriculum was developed in conjunction with "Tread Lightly!" and the National Off-Highway Vehicle Conservation Council. This program teaches land ethics, stewardship, safety, and environmental awareness and can be taught in full or segmented into desired chapters. The program is free! The program can be conducted in the field or classroom.

Grades: 3rd - 7th

Length: 1 hour per chapter, up to 9 chapters total

Students: 30 Maximum
